NEW UNESCO BIOSPHERE RESERVE

The Lagunas de Montebello have been included in Unesco's list of protected biosphere reserves. The 50 lagoons of varying sizes and great beauty are set in a hydrological region of high biological diversity, in an area that connects the highland region of Chiapas and the coastal plain of the Gulf of Mexico. The site is critically important for water harvesting and climate regulation. Beside harbouring many migratory bird species, it allows for the dispersion of characteristic flora of the central massif towards the Altos de Chiapas region.
